HVAC air duct systems don't have to be cleaned that often and should only be done so as needed, according to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). For instance, there are specific circumstances in which your air ducts may need to be cleaned, such as when there is a rodent nest inside, your home has been recently renovated, or your system has mold.

If your property meets the criteria for an air duct cleaning, be sure to hire a professional who follows the National Air Duct Cleaners Association (NADCA) protocols and will provide a complete cleaning of the entire HVAC system. You should also be aware of cheap air duct cleaning scams, in which services are listed as low as $50 for your entire home's air ducts. For your peace of mind, we have put together a list of the best companies providing air duct cleaning services following the guidelines established by NADCA.

Best Overall: DUCTZ

Why We Chose It: DUCTZ specializes in providing air duct cleaning services for both commercial and residential properties, following NADCA's cleaning measures.

What We Like

- NADCA-certified company
- Provides commercial and residential services
- Experts in air duct systems
- 50 locations throughout the nation

What We Don't Like

- Not all DUCTZ offices provide the same services

DUCTZ was established in 2002 and provides air duct cleaning and heating, ventilation, and air conditioning services for homeowners and businesses and has a presence in 22 states.

DUCTZ is certified and follows all of the protocols set by the NADCA for performing air duct cleanings. The company's technicians are trained to efficiently and safely remove and clean all of the debris found in your air duct system, including the access points of the system as well as the blowers and coils. The company's thorough cleaning process includes the use of high-efficiency particulate air (HEPA) vacuums, negative air pressure, and sealing and taping any holes before turning your system back on. In addition, DUCTZ offers dryer vent cleaning services and HVAC restorations.

The cost of the company's air duct cleaning service varies by location. When you get a quote from DUCTZ, you can expect to receive a detailed breakdown of the price and services. You can request a service on the company's website or by contacting your local office.
